LA FOLLETE SAYS ROOSEVELT CHARGES THEFT UNTRUE

WISCONSIN SENATOR DECLARES MOOSE DID NOT HAVE MAJORITY OF DELEGATES

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 31.—Theodore Roosevelt did not lose the republican nomination at the Chicago convention by theft; he with Governor McGovern of Wisconsin planned to "steam roll the nomination of Roosevelt" in the same manner in which Colonel Roosevelt dictated the nomination of Mr. Taft in 1908; "overmastering craving" for a third term is responsible for the birth of the bull moose party. Along these lines does Senator Robert M. La Follette continue his attack on Colonel Roosevelt in his fourth article in this week's issue of La Follette's magazine.

The Wisconsin senator also says that big business, personified in Geo. W. Perkins and steel and harvester trust officials, are behind the new movement.

In a minute analysis of Roosevelt's career Senator La Follette says that the trust policy which Mr. Roosevelt is now advocating—the policy of legalizing the trusts—was, in effect, carried out by Colonel Roosevelt when he was president.

Mr. Roosevelt, he declares, placed himself above the law when president and refused to prosecute trust magnates with whom he was on terms of friendly and political intimacy.

Colonel Roosevelt's interests in Mr. Morgan, Mr. Gary and Mr. Perkins and his part in the Tennessee Coal and Iron company deal, as well as numerous speeches and other actions, are cited to prove that Roosevelt thought more of the trusts than he did of the people during the seven and one-half years he occupied the White House.

Of Colonel Roosevelt's actions before the convention, he says:

"Knowing that he did not have a majority of the delegates honestly elected to the convention, Roosevelt made a loud outcry against the fraud which he professed to believe the national committee intended to perpetrate in passing upon contests to be brought before it. This served the double purpose of diverting attention from his own fraudulent contests and discrediting the decisions of the national committee in advance of its action."

The sole excuse for the formation of the new party was based upon the contention that delegates in the republican convention were stolen from one candidate and given to another. "Thou shalt not steal," was made the keynote of the Roosevelt bolting convention.

"Thou shalt not steal—from me would have been more in keeping as a Roosevelt slogan."

Senator La Follette concludes that Roosevelt lacked 74 votes of enough to nominate him. He says:

"The true psychology of the Roosevelt proceedings at Chicago became perfectly plain. He was there to force his own nomination or to smash the convention. He was not there to preserve the integrity of the republican party, and make it an instrument for the promotion of progressive principles and the restoration of government to the people. Otherwise he would have directed his managers to contest every inch of the ground for a progressive platform before the committee on resolutions and in the open convention. If he had evidence to prove that Taft could not be honestly and fairly nominated, why did he not direct his lieutenants to present that evidence to the national committee, and then to the convention and the country, so clearly that the convention would not have dared to nominate Taft and that Taft could not, in honor, have accepted the nomination if made?"

On Saturday night this theater has been rented to the democratic central committee. Picture show and political speaking, admission free.

AUTOLOADING SHOTGUN

For singles—trap or field—just tons in a shell, press the button and—"PULL." The side bolt makes it easy. You don't have to tug at the barrel or watch an on-and-off device. The action stays open after each single shot is fired.—It always stays open when the magazine is empty. Five shots—three to get the cripples—each under absolute control of the trigger finger. The recoil reloads for you—kicks another shell in; takes the strain off the gun—the discomfort out of the kick—all without diminishing the drive behind the shot.

Simple take-down—a few turns of the readily handled magazine screw-cap makes cleaning, carrying and interchange of barrels quick and easy.

Send for a motion picture booklet telling how the "kick" is used—how a friction device found only on the Remington-UMC Autoloading Shotgun takes the punishment out of heavy loads.
